

Exchange

France and Britain were almost constantly separated by war from 1792-1815, but it is possible to trace patterns of exchange and influence in fashion. Plates from both sides of the Channel were clearly inspired by, and in some cases directly copied from, one another.

These three plates from early 1802 explicitly demonstrate this mutual influence, which is evident throughout the period.

Shedding Layers

Regardless of simultaneous trends, French fashion was far more dramatic and radical than British fashion during this era.

Throughout Journal des Dames women wear garments that reveal their arms, shoulders, breasts and feet.

In British plates, not only are women's bodies almost completely covered in fabric.

Even their feet are rarely visible! The exception is when the figures brave the elements, and the driving rain and howling wind sweep up their skirts.

Interpreting Antique

Commonly called "neoclassical," dress during this period was often inspired by ancient Greek and Roman statues. This is apparent throughout the JDM, affecting all parts of dress, but occurs only sparingly and subtly in British fashion plates.
